Saint-Jean-de-Luz

- Explore the charming cobblestone streets of Saint-Jean-de-Luz, discovering its maritime history.
- Savor local Basque pintxos at a picturesque café, immersing yourself in the region's cuisine.

Begin your Basque adventure in Saint-Jean-de-Luz, a picturesque coastal town in southwestern France. Here, your expert local guide introduces you to the truly unique Basque region, which straddles the border between France and Spain. This distinct cultural area has its own language, traditions, and a strong sense of identity, divided politically between three provinces in France and four in Spain. Despite this division over two countries and a beautifully wide variety of terrain, the Basque people have maintained a cohesive cultural unity and a rich heritage that your guide illuminates as you stroll through the narrow cobblestone streets. Discover the town's maritime history, including its 17th-century golden age and the royal wedding of Louis XIV in 1660, while admiring the charming Basque architecture adorned with distinctive red and green shutters.

From the lively harbor, once home to a significant whaling fleet, your walk ends at the picturesque Place Louis XIV, surrounded by impressive 17th-century houses. Here you start to get an exposure to culture through cuisine, as you relax at a café and savor a sampling of local Basque pintxos (a sort of Basque equivalent to tapas in Spain). Throughout the week, a real benefit of expert local guides is eating like (and with) the locals. Think of it as the most delicious master class as your guide explains with each meal how Basque gastronomy reflects the region's unique position between mountains and sea while preserving its vibrant culture.
