TRAVEL + LEISURE

The Ultimate Cuba

For all you've heard about life in post-revolution Cuba, one of the country's great surprises is how much of its pre-Castro history has been preserved. This fascinating expedition includes the colorful colonial cities of Trinidad and Cienfuegos, where you explore cobblestoned streets, walk in lush mountains and snorkel on the tropical coral reef in the Bay of Pigs. In Havana, wander the 500-year-old city and out to Hemingway's home. Throughout, you'll interact closely with coffee-growers, artists, dancers, historians, and everyday Cubans.

Join us on the Havana Jazz Festival dates and enjoy all of the experiences in this itinerary against the backdrop of music throughout your days and evenings in Havana. You'll also enjoy three extraordinary 'only with Classic Journeys' experiences: sit down for drinks and a discussion with a musicologist (a personal friend of our guides), a private jazz session with a group of musicians who take you on a journey through different elements of Cuban music, and special access tickets to a concert so you get to the performance without having to arrange the details yourself.

DAY 1 »

Old Havana

- Explore Old Havana's historic streets with a local historian, uncovering centuries-old stories
- Create authentic Cuban dishes alongside a local chef, followed by a private rooftop jazz concert

After thinking about it for so long, you're finally in Havana! Your journey begins with a stroll through Habana Vieja (Old Havana) with a local historian, offering you a very personal take on Cuban history. This 500-year-old UNESCO World Heritage Site is the original heart of Havana, built by the Spanish, burned to the ground by pirates, and still a fine district of baroque and neoclassic buildings. While many of the buildings are well preserved or restored, you also get a sense of the challenges that lie ahead as you see a number of buildings that fell into ruin over the past half-century and await restoration.

Following your exploration of Old Havana, you'll meet with Roberto Salas, a photojournalist who had virtually unfettered access to Castro. You'll have the chance to hear stories of the last half-century and learn the back stories behind some iconic photos.

Tonight, enjoy a pairing of exclusive 'only with Classic Journeys' experiences. First, a local chef invites you into their kitchen to help prepare some popular Cuban dishes in a hands-on cooking instruction that leads to an unforgettable dinner. After savoring what you've made, make your way to their rooftop for a private jazz performance. Under the stars, soak in the sounds of world-class Cuban musicians who often perform in the Havana Jazz Festival, and tonight perform just for you

Havana / Hemingway's House

- Witness traditional cigar-making techniques at a working factory with an expert aficionado
- Discover Hemingway's Cuban life at Finca Vigia, guided by the property's curator

This morning, you have one of those experiences you can only get in Havana, as you visit a traditional, working, cigar-making factory. As you'll see, there's nothing automated about the process. Our aficionado-friend walks you through the rows of small stations where workers listen to the 'reader' recap the day's events from the pages of the local newspaper, while they select leaves and roll each cigar by hand. It's a fascinating process and you'll have a chance to light up a cigar if you're so inclined.

On your way to Revolution Square, you'll pass by the U.S.S. Maine and Granma Memorial. Your guided walk continues along Paseo el Prado and through Parque Central, where you'll see the capital building and the Gran Teatro de La Habana.

In the afternoon, you'll visit Finca Vigia, Ernest Hemingway's Cuban home. The curator of the property is a personal friend, and so she steps away from her normal schedule to spend time with you, walking through the grounds, and providing you a fascinating look into Hemingway's personal life as well as into rooms that are furnished as they were from 1939 to 1960, the period when the author lived here and wrote works including "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

This evening, strike out on your own to discover one of the privately owned and operated restaurants called paladares. Afterward, you can retire for the evening, or join your guide to retrace Hemingway's footsteps on a nighttime walk that ends up at El Floridita, a small bar Hemingway loved, where you can catch some live music and sip a daiquiri.

DAY 3 »

Havana

- Cruise Havana's streets in classic cars, ending at a private restoration workshop
- Learn salsa moves from professional dancers in an intimate, locally-owned studio

Your day begins with a colorful and unique experience. You'll be met at your hotel by craftsmen who work on classic cars. They'll take you for a tail-finned cruise along the Malecón and through Revolution Square before arriving at their workshop. Here, you'll get a terrific inside look into Cuba's car culture at this privately-owned business where artisans restore classic cars (and paint them in just about every color you can imagine). You'll have time to talk with our friends about the cars they treasure and the challenges of being small-business owners.

During your exploration today, you also get an inside look at the lives of everyday Cubans as you visit a market where you can chat with the locals and the farmers tending their stalls. You also stop at one of the government-owned rations stores where families buy rice, beans, sugar and other staples.

When you select your outfit for dinner tonight, think about what will move with you on the dance floor. The perfect complement to this day comes at the hands (and hips) of professional dancers. You're welcomed into a privately-owned dance studio for a salsa lesson that will have everybody swiveling and smiling and getting a real feel for the native Cuban spirit.

In the evening, you'll have a fascinating cocktail conversation with a former Cuban diplomat and professor of political science, who will provide candid insights on the once close and always complicated history between Cuba and the United States. Dinner this evening is at Havana's most elegant paladar, famous for its role in the Cuban movie "Fresa y Chocolate".

DAY 4 »

Bay of Pigs

- Snorkel Bay of Pigs' vibrant coral reefs, guided by a local marine naturalist
- Savor farm-to-table cuisine in Trinidad, sourced from nearby organic farms and fishing villages

This morning, you head for the Caribbean coast. A local naturalist will introduce you to the rich habitat of the Zapata Peninsula, a rich and biodiverse ecosystem that is one of the best preserved anywhere on the island. The peninsula's most famous spot is the Bay of Pigs, the otherwise quiet bay that was fixed in our collective memories by the failed 1961 attempt to invade Cuba. Linguists say that the name "Bay of Pigs" is actually a mistranslation of a word that means "triggerfish." When you look down into the bay's coral reef through a snorkel mask, you'll agree that the real name makes more sense. In the company of a naturalist Cuban guide, you can go in search of striped goatfish, peacock flounder, or Creole wrasse among countless others.

The day comes to a climax as you arrive in the World Heritage City of Trinidad. Tonight offers another enriching opportunity to experience culture through cuisine. First, you're now along the south coast while also right at the foot of the Escambray Mountains. Our chef sources fresh vegetables from a local organic farm, while the fish and lobster are exceptionally fresh, coming right from the nearby fishing village of Casilda.

DAY 5 »

Valley of the Sugar Mills / Trinidad

- Walk through sugar cane fields, meeting local farmers and witnessing rural Cuban life
- Participate in traditional sugar cane processing at a historic hacienda with a local family

Sugar cane, introduced to Cuba in the early 16th century, transformed the island into the world's leading sugar producer by the 19th century, shaping its economy and society. As you walk through El Valle de los Ingenios – the Valley of the Sugar Mills – this morning, the scenic vistas are spectacular, with lush green fields stretching to the vibrant Escambray mountains and glimpses of the beautiful sea in the distance. Along the way, you'll encounter local farmers tending their crops, children walking to school, and even oxen-drawn carts, offering a glimpse into the valley's enduring rural lifestyle.

Your journey leads you to Hacienda El Abanico, a historic quinta or estate. With your expert local guide, you'll learn about the tremendous scale of the sugar enterprise, the dependence on slavery, and the rich history of the area. You'll join the family for a hands-on sugar cane crushing and juicing demonstration, and have a chance to sip guarapo, the classic sugarcane juice drink. Afterward, you'll enjoy lunch with the family, experiencing a unique and personal perspective on Cuba's agricultural heritage.

The city of Trinidad has a vibe all its own as you'll instantly realize while you explore with a local who is your insider guide. It can feel like time has stood still since the mid-19th century when Trinidad was the unofficial capital of the sugar industry. The sense is made even stronger as you move through the streets and learn about the forces of business, colonialism and politics that gave birth to this city. Along the way, you'll see talented artists at work in their home.

DAY 6 »

Escambray Mountains Coffee Plantation / Trinidad

- Hike Escambray Mountains' diverse ecosystems, spotting unique flora and fauna with naturalists
- Experience coffee cultivation and production firsthand at a family-run mountain plantation

Che Guevara used the nearby Escambray Mountains as his staging ground. That same terrain that offered his revolutionary guerillas protection from government troops is also the perfect terroir for growing coffee beans. Your walk leads to a family-run coffee plantation where you are a welcome guest. With the next generation of coffee-growers, you learn about the agricultural heritage of the industry – and even have a chance to help with harvesting, sun-drying, roasting, or grinding the beans. Of course, you also get to taste the ultimate cup of homegrown, homemade coffee before sitting down with the family for lunch.

These same mountains also offer you a diverse ecosystem of lush rainforests and cloud forests, waterfalls, hiking trails and incredible biodiversity to explore in the company of your naturalist guide. With them, you'll walk through mahogany, cedar, teak, pine, and Cuba's national tree the royal palm. Along the way, you'll cross a hanging bridge and reach magnificent waterfalls where you'll pause to marvel at their jaw-dropping beauty and perhaps even take a refreshing dip in the crystal-clear pools below. As you continue your journey, you'll spot a wide variety of orchid species, Cuba's national bird the Trogon, the Pygmy Owl, the Cuban Parrot and the Bee Hummingbird (the world's smallest bird).

This evening after dinner, you have the 'only with Classic Journeys' experience relaxing with an expert sommelier, who gives you a master class in Cuban rum and cigars, complete with a tasting and instruction in each.

Cienfuegos / Havana

- Explore Cienfuegos' French-influenced architecture with a local historian, uncovering its unique heritage
- Reflect on your Cuban journey during a farewell lunch en route to Havana

A brief morning drive takes you to Cienfuegos, a seaside UNESCO World Heritage Site known as the "Pearl of the South." Its story is unique, as you'll discover on a walk led by a local historian. Founded in 1819, the city was settled by immigrants from France and Louisiana. Even now, you see clear hints of Paris and New Orleans in the architecture. It's also very well preserved thanks to its role as a prosperous center of shrimping and industry.

You'll transfer back to Havana, with lunch along the way, and arrive at the airport for flights home.

Special thanks to the Cuban people.

Thanks to the personal hospitality and generous spirit of the individual Cubans who have become our friends over many years and repeated visits to the island, all of the interactions and activities you enjoy during your time in Cuba are fully compliant with the U.S. government's "Support for the Cuban People" general license guidelines.
