TRAVEL + LEISURE

Lively Exposure to Cuban Arts & Culture

In the first half of the 20th century, Americans hopped down to Havana for a long weekend, spiced with the culture of the tropics. Now that idea is back for you to connect with the city's artists, musicians and dancers, and even get in a salsa lesson. To get a feel for everyday life, shop in a farmers' market with the locals, cook lunch with a Cuban chef, and meet a family that restores classic tail-finned cars. Enjoy dining at the city's finest privately-owned restaurants and exploring historic landmarks from a working cigar factory to Ernest Hemingway's home. Join us on the Havana Jazz Festival dates and enjoy all of the experiences in this itinerary against the backdrop of music throughout your days and evenings in Havana. You'll also enjoy three extraordinary 'only with Classic Journeys' experiences: sit down for drinks and a discussion with a musicologist (a personal friend of our guides), a private jazz session with a group of musicians who take you on a journey through different elements of Cuban music, and special access tickets to a concert so you get to the performance without having to arrange the details yourself.

DAY 1 »

Old Havana

- Explore Old Havana's historic streets with a local historian, uncovering centuries-old stories
- Create authentic Cuban dishes alongside a local chef, followed by a private rooftop jazz concert

After thinking about it for so long, you're finally in Havana! Your journey begins with a stroll through Habana Vieja (Old Havana) with a local historian, offering you a very personal take on Cuban history. This 500-year-old UNESCO World Heritage Site is the original heart of Havana, built by the Spanish, burned to the ground by pirates, and still a fine district of baroque and neoclassic buildings. While many of the buildings are well preserved or restored, you also get a sense of the challenges that lie ahead as you see a number of buildings that fell into ruin over the past half-century and await restoration.

Following your exploration of Old Havana, you'll meet with Roberto Salas, a photojournalist who had virtually unfettered access to Castro. You'll have the chance to hear stories of the last half-century and learn the back stories behind some iconic photos.

Tonight, enjoy a pairing of exclusive 'only with Classic Journeys' experiences. First, a local chef invites you into their kitchen to help prepare some popular Cuban dishes in a hands-on cooking instruction that leads to an unforgettable dinner. After savoring what you've made, make your way to their rooftop for a private jazz performance. Under the stars, soak in the sounds of world-class Cuban musicians who often perform in the Havana Jazz Festival, and tonight perform just for you.

Havana / Hemingway's House

- Witness traditional cigar-making techniques at a working factory with an expert aficionado
- Discover Hemingway's Cuban life at Finca Vigia, guided by the property's curator

This morning, you have one of those experiences you can only get in Havana, as you visit a traditional, working, cigar-making factory. As you'll see, there's nothing automated about the process. Our aficionado-friend walks you through the rows of small stations where workers listen to the 'reader' recap the day's events from the pages of the local newspaper, while they select leaves and roll each cigar by hand. It's a fascinating process and you'll have a chance to light up a cigar if you're so inclined.

On your way to Revolution Square, you'll pass by the U.S.S. Maine and Granma Memorial. Your guided walk continues along Paseo el Prado and through Parque Central, where you'll see the capital building and the Gran Teatro de La Habana.

In the afternoon, you'll visit Finca Vigia, Ernest Hemingway's Cuban home. The curator of the property is a personal friend, and so she steps away from her normal schedule to spend time with you, walking through the grounds, and providing you a fascinating look into Hemingway's personal life as well as into rooms that are furnished as they were from 1939 to 1960, the period when the author lived here and wrote works including "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

This evening, strike out on your own to discover one of the privately owned and operated restaurants called paladares. Afterward, you can retire for the evening, or join your guide to retrace Hemingway's footsteps on a nighttime walk that ends up at El Floridita, a small bar Hemingway loved, where you can catch some live music and sip a daiquiri.

DAY 3 »

Havana

- Cruise Havana's streets in classic cars, ending at a private restoration workshop
- Learn salsa moves from professional dancers in an intimate, locally-owned studio

Your day begins with a colorful and unique experience. You'll be met at your hotel by craftsmen who work on classic cars. They'll take you for a tail-finned cruise along the Malecón and through Revolution Square before arriving at their workshop. Here, you'll get a terrific inside look into Cuba's car culture at this privately-owned business where artisans restore classic cars (and paint them in just about every color you can imagine). You'll have time to talk with our friends about the cars they treasure and the challenges of being small-business owners.

During your exploration today, you also get an inside look at the lives of everyday Cubans as you visit a market where you can chat with the locals and the farmers tending their stalls. You also stop at one of the government-owned rations stores where families buy rice, beans, sugar and other staples.

When you select your outfit for dinner tonight, think about what will move with you on the dance floor. The perfect complement to this day comes at the hands (and hips) of professional dancers. You're welcomed into a privately-owned dance studio for a salsa lesson that will have everybody swiveling and smiling and getting a real feel for the native Cuban spirit.

In the evening, you'll have a fascinating cocktail conversation with a former Cuban diplomat and professor of political science, who will provide candid insights on the once close and always complicated history between Cuba and the United States. Dinner this evening is at Havana's most elegant paladar, famous for its role in the Cuban movie "Fresa y Chocolate".

DAY 4 »

Havana - Vedado & The Malecón

- Stroll from Vedado along the Malecón to the legendary Hotel Nacional for a personalized tour
- Savor a farewell lunch in a tucked-away paladar and browse Old Havana's artisan shops

Wake to the gentle hum of Vedado, Havana's leafy, quietly glamorous district where your boutique hotel feels like a well-kept secret among friends. This morning, you set out on foot, tracing the shaded boulevards toward the U.S. Embassy. The walk is cinematic—palms swaying, classic cars gliding by, and the salty breeze from the Straits of Florida in your hair. Your expert local guide, who seems to know every story tucked behind every façade, shares tales of intrigue and resilience that have unfolded along this very stretch. The embassy itself is more than a building; it's a symbol of the complex dance between two nations, and you feel its gravity as you pass by, the Malecón's iconic seawall beckoning just ahead.

You continue along the Malecón, Havana's beloved promenade, where locals gather to fish, flirt, and philosophize. Soon, the grand Hotel Nacional rises before you—a symbol of Cuba before the Revolution and before that of the glam, luxury, and mob activity in 1950's Cuba. With your guide's insider access, you 'slip behind the velvet rope' for a personalized tour to see where the anti-aircraft batteries were stored in the gardens during the Cuban Missile Crisis, to hear the stories of the array of celebrities who stayed here in the decades leading up to the Revolution, and even to learn about its role in The Godfather Part 2. Then, if time allows, savor a rich Cuban coffee on the terrace, the city's pastel skyline unfurling before you. It's a moment to linger, to imagine, and to feel Havana's pulse beneath your feet.

After your morning of discovery, you make your way back to Old Havana, where a final lunch awaits in a tucked-away paladar. Here, you dine like a true Habanero—sharing laughter and stories, sampling flavors that linger long after the last bite. Before heading to the airport, you have a little time to wander the cobbled streets for last-minute treasures: vibrant art or perhaps a perfectly imperfect ceramic from a local artisan. As you say your goodbyes, you realize this isn't just a farewell to Havana, but a promise to return. You've walked at eye level, met the makers, and tasted the real Cuba—an experience only Classic Journeys could have curated, and one you'll carry home in your heart.
